

NFRAL

NLIU FORUM FOR RESEARCH
IN ARBITRATION LAW

ONLINE FORUM FOR WRITING AND
RESEARCH IN ARBITRATION

WWW.NFRAL.IN

Find your individual look with our bomber jackets, face skirts, denim dresses, and more at the best prices!

CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS:
ARTICLES AND BLOGS

ABOUT NFRAL

NFRAL, an exclusively online forum for writing and research in arbitration run by a body of students, legal professionals and academicians, is now live at www.nfral.in.

NFRAL has been conceptualized to:

- a) Create a forum for publishing cutting-edge writing on arbitration on an ongoing basis.
- b) Develop a community of researchers and authors to create an open access comprehensive online commentary on Indian arbitration.

ROLLING SUBMISSIONS

NFRAL is now accepting submissions - 'articles' and 'blog posts' on a rolling basis.

Original contributions analysing an issue relevant to understanding or development of arbitration law are welcome.

While there is no preset limitation on the length of an article, short pieces enhance the quality of legal scholarship.

Blog pieces should typically be within 1200-1500 words.

GUIDELINES

Contributors must comply with the following standards:

Abstract: Articles should be submitted with an abstract of 100-150 words in length.

Formatting:

- Must be word-processed
- Times New Roman only
- Line spacing 1.5
- One-line gap between all paragraphs and headings.
- One-inch indent at beginning of all paragraphs.

Citation: Please access our citation style sheet here.

Exclusivity: We encourage exclusive submissions. If your piece is under consideration for publication anywhere else by another journal, please indicate so in the submission form provided on the site.

Anonymization: The name of the author or institutional affiliation must not be mentioned anywhere in the submission, but in the fields stipulated in the submission form.

Co-authorship: If there are co-authors, please provide the details in the submission form.

HOW TO SUBMIT

All contributions should be submitted through the “submit now” feature on the NFRAL website.

QUERIES

Any query concerning a contribution can be made to editor@nfral.in.

SUBMIT NOW!

